Dulles, Huxley Due In Evening Class

The University of California begins its 46th year of extension classes in San Diego next month with courses ranging from city planning to space explorations.

More than 100 faculty members will be teaching evening courses in Coronado, Grossmont, Solana Beach and 12 locations in San Diego.

More than 100 courses are described in the spring 1963 extension catalog available at the extension office, 1221 Fourth Ave.

Courses offered include industrial relations at the University of Michigan; Aldous Huxley, philosopher, author and lecturer, and Walter Heller, chairman of President Kennedy's Council of Economic Affairs.

"Lunar Missions and Explorations" is a course oriented toward scientists and engineers and will be coordinated by Peter H. Snyder, training director of the Navy Electronics Laboratory.

Other extension courses to be covered include motion pictures; folk music, fine arts, urban sprawl and will be taught by local civic and government leaders.

"Land and Life in California," is a 14-part lecture series dealing with problems of former director of the U.S. Central Intelligence Agency George Odiorne, director of
